Part of the Great Florida Birding Trail, the park is a well-known stopping point for more than 150 migratory bird species. The trailhead to its Nature Trail also accesses the Teneroc Trail (Saddle Creek II). There is a day-use fee of $3 per person to trek Saddle Creek II, which is only open Friday through Monday. (Children under 16, adults 65 and over fee exempt.) No fee for anyone to trek Saddle Creek Nature Trail.

Things to See

Limpkins, large spotted waders standing about 28 inches tall are found in Saddle Creek's open freshwater marshes and along the shorelines. Often heard at dawn, at night and on cloudy days, the limpkin's cry is a piercing, banshee wail. Other animals that inhabit the park include alligators, turtles, snakes, aquatic reptiles, amphibians and many species of fish, insects and a variety of mammals including deer, otters, raccoons and foxes.

The Saddle Creek Nature Trail

is 1.2 miles in length. Since it dead-ends and does not loop, the full hike is more like 2.4 miles. The trail is very broad, well maintained and an easy trek which will take approximately one hour to complete. An informational kiosk marks the entrance access to the Teneroc Trail (Saddle Creek II).

FIND THE CACHE WITHOUT GPS: Saddle Creek Nature Trail - Head south down the trail past the Observation Tower. You will pass three benches along the trail. Look for the vehicle turnaround area on the north side of the trail, just past the third bench. Turn into the turnaround and look behind the first large tree on the east side. Saddle Creek II - From the trailhead follow the blue/orange blaze trail until the trail intersection. Follow the trail to the west (clockwise) and cross two footbridges. At the "Strenuous/Easy" trail signs you can follow the white blazed trail to an observation tower with scenic views. After visiting the observation tower backtrack to the "Strenuous/Easy" trail sign. You can take either trail, they will merge back into one trail after a short distance. A short distance past the merge the trail will intersect with the orange/blue blazed trail. Follow the orange blaze trail across the Saddle Creek footbridge. At the "Loop" and "Tenoroc" trail signs follow the trail to the west (left) and look for the large oak covered in moss on the south side of the trail, about half way between the "Loop" and "Tenoroc" trail signs and the first orange/blue blaze pine tree. The geocache is as the base of the oak tree.
